April 30th. --I took a beautifully marked variety of the March Crosswing (AnUopteryx tescularia), an insect generally taken at the end of February. At 12. 30 p. m. my wife called my attention to a Pond-skater (Hydrometra lacustris) skimming about in a fountain basin in our garden, and as we had only filled it with water the previous day we concluded that this insect had flown from the Basingstoke Canal, which lies some 300 yards to our north-west, the wind blowing from that direction. I have never known this insect take such a long or high flight, having to pass over two roads with houses. Its sight too must be wonderfully keen to have seen the water in the basin which is but 4ft. 6in. in diameter. The elytra and wings of this insect are very interesting, and the peculiar arrangement of the veins or wing bones is well worth careful study. May 4th to 5th. --We had 5 degrees of frost. --Frkd.
